

I was very troubled at the least to read in a recent email that your commission is considering the possibility of forbidding religious broadcasting on both radio and television. There is not constitutional reason for this consideration. If certain individuals don't want to hear or view religious broadcasting they have the choice and right to select from the hundreds of other viewing and listening options. I urge you commission to think long and hard before making this decision and think back to the type of country we had prior to the prohibition of prayer in public places and schools and think now how it is post prohibition. Would you have rethought that decision? Think about it. With all that is against what is pure and good being freely seen and heard why not provide the option for those of us believers. With the success of "The Passion Of Christ" we know that there are millions of us who are yearning for goodness so let us not forsake them for the sake of a few.
